NO CAUSE FOR PANIC SAYS GENERAL BLUE

TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS FROM ALL POINTS
SHOW FLU IS UNDER CONTROL
OF AUTHORITIES

LOCAL SITUATION NOT SERIOUS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—Surgeon General Blue of the United States Public Health service today warned the country not to become panicky at the influenza situation despite the apparent increase in the number of cases. Nowhere, he said, is there any indication that the disease is beyond the control of local authorities.

Blue received telegraph reports as follows:
New York: 1,332 cases of influenza and 323 deaths, 450 pneumonia with 79 deaths.

Utah: "Some increase is being seen in Ogden."
Oklahoma: "Influenza seems on the increase but in mild form."

Wyoming: 152 cases, one death.
San Francisco: 69 cases, 10 deaths.
Montana: Much so-called grip in this state.
Connecticut: 242 cases "mostly in Waterbury."
Wisconsin: Scattering influenza cases.
Kansas: Influenza prevalent.
Richmond, Va.: 117 cases.

Officials of the University of Michigan hospital today telegraphed the Public Health bureau asking for prompt shipment of serum. Although no explanation was given officials assumed that it may be needed for treatment of influenza patients.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24—With one out of every 100 persons in Chicago ill with the influenza today, according to estimates, Health Commissioner Robertson returned to take charge of the offensive against the epidemic. There were 2,193 new cases reported yesterday and 48 deaths. New cases of pneumonia were 341 and 53 deaths. Telephone service was seriously threatened with 1600 operators ill with influenza.

There seems to be quite a number of cases he is attending in his office. The brief mention of two cases in the Clearfield Progress last evening having been given, with the exception that served to direct public attention to the temperature ranges higher, due to the question of a possible epidemic of a more serious nature of the disease.

The Progress got into communication with a number of the physicians of the town today, and found that there is quite a bit of sickness existing. The situation as to whooping cough and a considerable number of and resultant pneumonia, among the "flu" cases in the town. Fortunately children, is much more serious, the disease being assisted in its spread by parents in the homes, conveying the fact of their children having the disease, and neglecting any quarantine regulations.

DEACON WILLIAMS GETS MAIL CARRYING CONTRACT

Postmaster General Burleson has formed a partnership with Deacon Williams and these two gentlemen have entered into an agreement to enter into a contract to expedite the mails to and from the Clearfield postoffice and the different railroad stations.

During the past few years the Postoffice Department has been paying David Whaling $1,200 per year for hauling the mail in Clearfield, the contractor being required to furnish trucks and other equipment necessary for the work. The high cost of living hit Dave, and being unable to longer continue the work at the starvation wages offered, was forced to resign the position when his request for a raise was refused by the most economical and most belated Postmaster General in the country's history.

Bids were then asked for the job. The bids were opened December 28th, when it was found that Geo. Wilson wanted $1,500 to take the place of David Whaling, $1,750 and Deacon Williams, $1,400.

Waiving his well-known sectional Jim Crow feelings, the Postmaster General took Deacon to the bosom of his official family, and notified him that the job was his. Upon the completion of the necessary and usual formalities relating to the award of a contract, the Deacon's business organization.

The "Deacon" is now preparing his affairs preparatory to assuming the burden of getting the mails on and out on time. Meanwhile the patrons of the office will ever pray for proper service and hope for the best.

Postmaster General Burleson claims to have conducted the affairs of the Postoffice Department so economically during 1918 that he was able to return a surplus of $15,000,000 to the U. S. Treasury, but he failed to say anything about the 215,000,000 complaints about insufficient and inefficient service received from Maine to California, and the untold millions of loss and inconvenience to the people of the land, who require and desire proper service even tho' they have to pay for it. Of course the difference between $1,400 and the $1,500 asked by David Whaling, a competent man who knows what the service is worth, will go into next year's surplus.

WINBURNE WOMAN DIES

Mrs. Joseph Redmond, of Winburne, died at the Clearfield Hospital yesterday morning at ten o'clock, after a serious illness. She is survived by her husband and three small children. Mrs. Redmond is a daughter of Mrs. John Moyle, of Winburne. The sympathy of the community is with the mourning husband and children.

BASKET BALL IS THE FAVORITE SPORT NOW

Varsity Team Loses Again But
Does Much Better Work
Than In Last Games

SCRUB TEAMS BOTH WIN OUT

Clearfield did a kind office business in basket ball last evening; out of three possible victories, Clearfield teams managed to get two. Junior High won from DuBois eighth grade and C. H. S. second team defeated the Reynoldsville reserves, but High's varsity men lost to Punxsutawney by a score of 42 to 33.

The game between Junior High and DuBois eighth grade was one of the "snappiest games seen on the High school floor this year. DuBois sent over a plucky bunch of players, but Coach Ross' huskies (they will be some day) were a little too much for them. Backed up by an enthusiastic bunch of rooters, Junior High proceeded to win from the DuBois team by a score of 7 to 10. Both teams showed a considerable amount of skill and although the referee experienced some difficulty in keeping track of the "fence," the game was highly satisfactory.

The two schools were represented by the following players:

|------------|-----------|
| J. H. S. | DuBois |
| Mitchell | Russell |
| Waterworth | W. Miller |
| Brown | Schwom |
| Barney | B. Miller |
| Cramer | G. Fry |

Substitutes: J. H. S., Shugarts and Corrigan; DuBois, Sparks.

In the first few minutes of the game between C. H. S. and Reynoldsville second teams the playing was loose and without any semblance of skill or team work. Several of the Clearfield players had never played in a big game before and consequently it took them quite a while to get their bearings. But once they did get settled into their proper places the scrubs lived up to their name by cleaning up the Reynoldsville team in neat order.

Many of the scores on both sides were due to good luck rather than skillful playing, especially in the first half. When the game was resumed at the beginning of the second half, however, Reynoldsville struck a new pace and by keeping it up for a time made the game interesting. C. H. S. worked hard and by means of good guarding and increased speed in their floor work they soon put a dampener on Reynoldsville's spirit. The visitors put up a game fight to the end but lost by a score of 23-16.

The following men defended the sub-title of their respective schools: Reynoldsville: C. Smith, C. Smith, J. Smith, J. Benney, J. Miller, J. Love. Substitutes: Reynoldsville, H. Warren; Clearfield, Batchelor. Despite the fact that they had never played together in a game before, Clearfield's substitutes developed a surprising amount of team work and it was because of this co-ordinated effort that they were enabled to win.

The local High School football team was unable to check its winning streak of the Punxsutawney High and accordingly went down to defeat in a league game on the Punxsutawney floor by the score of 42 to 33.

The local boys showed the good effects of the strenuous practice they had been getting since the Reynoldsville game and are rapidly improving in form.

They put up a great battle at Punxsutawney for all but the final two minutes of the game. At the end of the first half the score stood Clearfield 15, Punxsutawney 14. The boys maintained their lead in a grueling battle up to within two minutes of the final whistle, when the pace became too hot, the ball went up and Punxsutawney copped four baskets and the game.

The other League games resulted as follows:

KRUPP WORKERS ARE CONTENT WITHOUT BEER WITH LUNCH

By Carl D. Groat

United Press Staff Correspondent
ESSEN, Germany.—(By Mail)—The myth that the laborer must have his beer to be contented is—only a myth, according to Herr Fritz Homann of the Krupp works.

Herr Homann, who speaks English like an English gentleman and without the trace of a German accent, was my conductor on an interesting trip through the famous steel plant. "What is the situation as regards drinking among your workers," I asked.

"We abolished beer from our plant before the war, and find that its absence does not impair either the contentment or the efficiency of the workers," he replied. "We used to issue mineral water and milk to take the place of the beer. Of course, issuing milk is now quite out of the question, especially when there isn't enough in Germany for babies and invalids. So we give them mineral water instead. It makes absolutely no difference with them that they do not have their beer."

"Of course, they can have beer—so long as it is—after hours outside the plant, but our beer is, I judge, about the same as American beer at this time as regards strength and quality."

As to the prohibition movement in general, Herr Homann was skeptical of its taking a hold on Germany. "The Germans," he pointed out, are more conservative than before the war, and generally cut off a lot of the poorer classes, hence there is a limited reaction in the drinking of strong liquors."

"We have in Germany," he continued, "the sort of prohibition movement that we have two groups—the Blue Cross and the 'Gut Templers,' the latter being an organization which comes here from the Scandinavian countries. There is in Germany, however, little drunkenness and hence little that these organizations can do. As for beer and wine, they are taken everywhere in Germany. In fact, I have been told that the probable outcome of the prohibition movement in America will be that beer and wine will ultimately be permitted."

RESTITUTION MADE TO INNOCENT MAN WITH WAR RECORD

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 24.—United Press.—Convicted and sentenced to two years and nine months in the penitentiary for larceny and at the same time given a dishonorable discharge from the regular army as a result, a former soldier, through a confession made by his brother to the crime he was charged with, is to be restored to his full rights with an honorable discharge from the army. In December 1915, Private Jacob E. Shockey, a member of "77th Company, Third Infantry, U. S. A., was convicted in the Franklin county court of larceny and sentenced to the Eastern penitentiary. At the same time he was given a dishonorable discharge from the army. Several weeks ago Shockey wrote to the eastern division headquarters of the army at Governor's Island, claiming that the Pennsylvania State Pardon Board had granted him a pardon because his brother had confessed to the crime for which he was sentenced to the penitentiary.

Governor's Island Officials wrote the Pennsylvania State Department to verify the former soldier's claim and the official records of this office which were sent to them did this. A copy of the pardon bearing the Great Seal of the Commonwealth was mailed to the army officials and as a result the stigma of a dishonorable discharge and a court conviction for a crime will have been removed.

Eddie Leitzinger and brother John attended the show at Phillipsburg last evening.

"FLU" AGAIN

"Yes, every bad cold will be flu now," said one of the same neighbors who said the same thing last year and did not see to his senses until he saw the undertakers getting busy in his neighborhood.

Government health officials and medical men are again giving their good advice and warning the people that there is a likelihood of a return of influenza. Their judgment appears to have been good as the flu is already upon us and while there is cause for alarm there is good reason for heeding the warning put out by those who know.

No cure for the disease has yet been found. Medical science pointed. All that mortal man can do is to set his house in order for the reception of the unwelcome visitor. This can be done only by keeping in good physical condition and going to bed at the first appearance of symptoms. The symptoms are sneezing, headache, tickling cough and pains in the legs, groins and back, resembling rheumatic pains. These symptoms are not always present. Immediate attention from a physician in case that there be an early diagnosis, is the best safeguard.

Let us not take lightly the second approach of the flu. Remember that in keeping it down you are serving the interests of your neighbor as well as yourself.

HOW DO YOU LIKE THIS?

"Uncle Joe" Cannon is exhibiting his friends a poem sent to him by a Democrat who is sorely tried these days. The poem is imbued with the spirit of Edgar Allan Poe. The stanzas allowed the Washington Star to copy the affecting verses, which read:

In a midnight dream,
I pondered weak and weary,
Of dear Billy Bryan
And of all his silver love.
Suddenly there came a rapping,
Of some one greatly tapping,
Tapping on my chamber door;
And a silver voice came speaking:
"Billy's with you evermore!"

"Oh!" in anguish cried I, weeping;
I had thought you dead and sleeping,
Lying in a silver casket.
On some far and Stygian shore!"
Said Billy, "only waiting;
Now I'll join in your debating;
I am with you evermore!"

"Oh, Bill!" cried I, "have some pity!
We've danced to your ditty,
Danced on plain, in town and city,
And went bustled, riled and sore;
And with thou forever vex us?
With thou, William, still perplex us?"
And quoth William, "Evermore!"

"Oh!" I cried, "Oh, ghost!" upstart-
ing,
Sneer through my soul now darting—
"I never died and sad and sore,
And you evermore outlast us?
Now as up as heretofore?"
And quoth William, "Evermore!"

SQUIRE MILLIGAN WANTS TO BE HEARD

Squire James A. Milligan asks to be "born in" on that "last wolf" which long enough to say he saw the animal during the winter of 1886. Editor Frank D. O'Reilly, of the Daily Express, suggests converting the "county battle" into a barracks for the army. Why not?

Address Of Dr. Bender At Unveiling of Rishell Memorial

Only ninety-five years ago, the 17th interest. Ludendorff was recognized of next June the foundation of as the brains of the German army. Bunker Hill Monument our first great Hindenberg was his subordinate, and Memorial of Patriotism was finished, the Kaiser is called Ludendorff's "rub- and the corner stone was put in its her stamp."

place by Lafayette. Daniel Webster delivered an oration to a great audience, in which there were 200 Revolutionary veterans, 40 of them survivors of the battle of Bunker Hill, fifty years before. Today 110 millions of people cherish the National ideals that became triumphant by the Revolutionary war.

English Lords had been asking, "How is it possible for an army of undisciplined citizens, without ammunition without money, or navy to fight against the strongest nation on earth?" The answer was given at Yorktown, when the governor of Virginia asked Lafayette, "To what particular spot would you direct us to point our cannon?" Lafayette, raising his hand and pointing to the spot, replied, "To that house; it is the best house in the world. You mine. It is the best house in the world, and there you will be certain to find Lord Cornwallis, and the British Headquarters." That unselfish and whole-souled patriotism demand- ing the sacrifice of property and of life was our answer to Great Britain. This same spirit has made pos- sible all of the memorials of our National Life.

Memorials are the land-marks of history. They keep open the path over which past generations have trodden. They preserve the memory of great events. They signalize vic- tories. They glorify the men and women who made the sacrifices de- manded by the necessities of the hour. They declare that the ideals of hu- man progress shall never perish. They require the reading of every passing generation. The stamp of divine approval was put upon them when God said to Moses, "Write this for a memorial, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua." Moses built an Altar, and inscribed on it, "Jehovah, my Banner."

We have recently come through the greatest war in history. The mean- ing and magnitude of our victory grows upon us like a morning dawn. In its beginning and upon the surface, the war seemed to be simply a con- flict of national armies. Misunder- standing and confusion prevailed as to the underlying motive of Germany, Russia and England. Germany called it a war for the defense of the Eu- ropean continent and announced that she had been forced upon her. Diplomats de- clared that Russia had entered the war in order to capture Constantinople for her passage to the sea. The English government was greatly em- barrassed by a prevalent misunder- standing of the moral pressure that made England the ally of Belgium and France. By a German propa- ganda, both in England and in this country, it was declared to be a war in the interest of capital in Eng- land, labor said "Let the Capitalists fight it out with Germany." They were very reluctant to enlist until Lloyd George went to them and con- vinced them of their error. This country stood aloof until the real meaning of the war came into clear vision.

As the war progressed it gradually became clear that beneath the con- flicts of armies, there was a conflict of national ideals. With Germany the ideal was military supremacy for word empire; autocracy against de- mocracy; the divine right of kings against the divine right of citizen- ship. With the allies the ideal was the national welfare of humanity, in the spirit of democracy. Upon the part of Germany reliance was based upon a vast organization of material power, while upon the part of the allies reliance was placed upon an ap- proved national conscience as to civic righteousness. With forty years of silent preparation, Germany was pro- vided with the stronger force at the beginning, while the Allies had to wait for the awakening of the nation- al conscience, and until they had come into the consciousness of their national peril.

A War of Frighfulness

For the same reason Germany made it a war of frightfulness from the beginning. Her object was to strike terror into the hearts of the allies, by the destruction of property, by the devastation of cities and country, by the renunciation of national treaties, by ignoring interna- tional laws, by brutality and an in- discriminate slaughter of men, women and children, by becoming the hidden peril of the sea, and the death-deal- ing power of the air. In these var- ious ways Germany hoped to break down the spirit and morale of the allies, as tyrants used to break down the spirit of slaves.

We (the United States) declared war against Germany April 5th, 1917. General Von Ludendorff's history of the war, from the German side, con- tains many statements of absorbing piet in one of Frank Holland's fa- mous cartoons, in England. The Kaiser, alone in a boat, is in evident fright. He is looking at a constel- lation of stars, from which proceed a long line of bayonets directed against him, while Uncle Sam takes the place of the man in the moon, and looks down upon the Kaiser's fright with evident pleasure. This is what our war activities meant to Ger- many.

The Reflex Influence of the War Upon Us

By this time we ought to be able to discover the reflex influence of this war upon us. This war has made it clear that there are two levels of citizenship. First, there is the level of the individual—his rights, his sphere of activity and the rewards of his personal merits. Second—There is the higher level of citizenship se- cured by a national activity. Dur- ing times of peace we are apt to lose sight of the magnifying power that national activity secures to the in- dividual. In the development of a national consciousness, and a national conscience, the spirit of the national unit pervades us all. We then live out of individualism into nationalism; out of our personal littleness into an aggregate greatness; out of weakness into power. In this magnified citizen- ship our national ideals come into vision. The national flag then comes forth as the emblem of national power. It relates us to a glorious past, and leads the way to a more glori- ous future. The flag unifies and idealizes our national life. It gives coherence and order to our activities, and reflects the glory of achievement. By it the loyal citizenship of the whole nation is elevated. Our national ideals and our patriotism become sacred. Selfishness is surmounted by the enthusiasm of the national spirit.

In such a moral atmosphere, to die for one's country is gain. Here vic- tory means not only a vanquished enemy, but the triumph of enlarged manhood. It is a revelation of a national power that is able to sweep away the obstructions that lie in the path of human progress. By this national activity the individual is car- ried to the summit of aspirational achievement, where he sees light in God's light, and enters into the joy of his Lord. Such men die in calm re- sponse beneath the gaze of the stars.

In his last naval battle for his country, Lord Nelson felt upon the deck of his vessel, mortally wounded. As the sleep of death was coming upon him, an officer bent down over the great warrior and said, "We have gained the victory." Lord Nelson was aroused out of his stupor, and replied, "Thank God, I have done my duty."

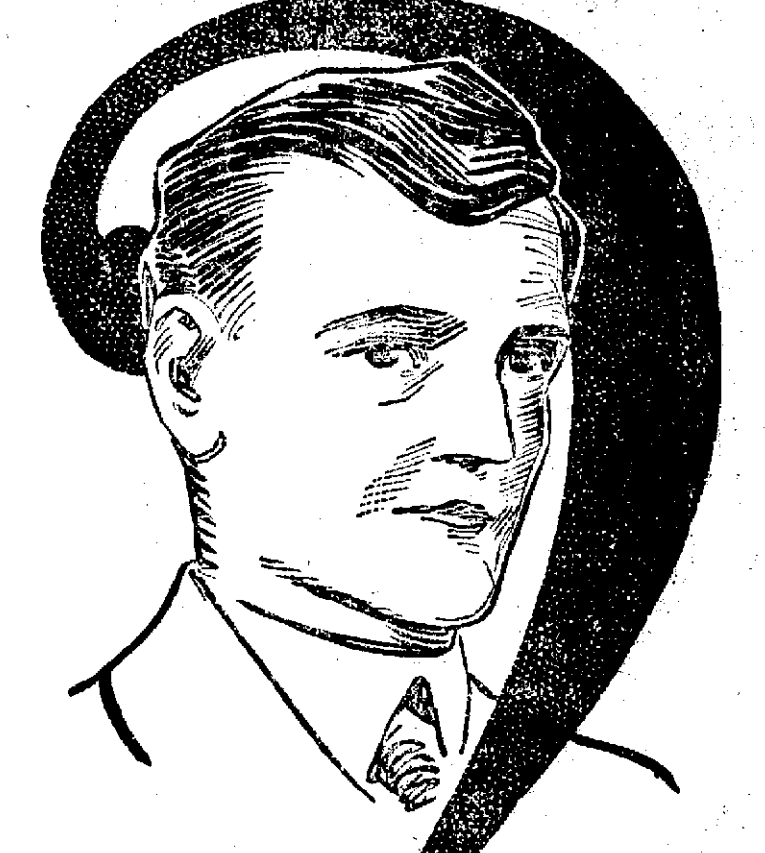

Another reflex influence of this war is a quickened moral insight that comes through suffering. This war has brought to a sudden halt, the materialistic trend of our civilization. During the past fifty years of peace- ful prosperity, we concentrated our minds upon a practical material effi- ciency. Moral, intellectual and reli- gious culture were all subordinated to a materialistic culture. The con- viction became current that inter- national commerce would prevent war; that our complex financial interests so demanded the conditions of peace, as to make it clear that no nation would imperil her existence by plung- ing into war.

We were also persuaded that our modern science would prevent war; that science had so far brought within our grasp, the destructive forces of nature, that war would mean destruc- tion, as to make it an impossible peril, in this day of intelligence. We have been shocked into a moral conscious- ness by the colossal failure of our materialistic philosophy. The great nation, in which modern science was given the right of way, and in which, applied science attained to a more ab- solute efficiency than in any other, has turned out to be the greatest enemy that civilization has had to confront. These German champions of material efficiency had vast armies of scientifically trained men; equip- ped with all the destructive forces that science had evolved; that moved with the precision of great machines; whose cannon cast the messengers of death a distance of 75 miles; whose airplanes from the clouds, dropped explosives and death-dealing gasses of frightful efficiency, and YET that nation now lies prostrate with exhaus- tion and humiliated by defeat. With her downfall, she carries the ever- lasting explosion of her materialistic philosophy.

Our Task

With this quickened moral insight we are brought face to face with the problems of reconstruction. Can we abandon our American worship of "force" and "drive" and "nerve" and "muscle"? Can we check the spirit of covetousness, of greed and graft in order to grasp the higher values of human life? Can we make any de- cided progress toward the ideals of Social Justice? Can we subordinate our materialistic progress to moral manhood-progress? The demand of the hour is not a better scientific apparatus, but better moral insight, a

The Factory, The Facilities The Institution Behind The Car

One of the most important factors to consider in buying an automobile is the factory behind the car.

The plant of the Hudson Motor Car Company at Detroit is the largest factory in the world devoted exclusively to the manufacture of fine automobiles. It covers more than twenty-six acres of ground and includes more than 1,000,000 square feet of manufacturing space.

Within its walls there are carried on more than 100 different operations necessary in building Hudson cars, the perfection of its equipment insuring the high quality of its output. Material is purchased in the immense quantities necessary to make possible the turning out of a car of the highest quality at the lowest possible price.

These facilities make possible the most perfecting efficiency, the result of which is the delivery of such extraordinary values that the Hudson Super Six has become the most popular and the largest selling fine car in the world.

In addition the Super Six has a patented motor obtainable in no other car. By the use of an exclusive principle the power is increased 72 per cent without any increase in weight in the sacrifice of simplicity.

To obtain a Hudson, even for delivery next year, it is necessary to act now as the demand has always been greater than the supply and our allotment is strictly limited.

border. Some day when he had a hunting partner, or when his nerves were frayed from a delirium, a silent stranger, walked into his presence, looked long and steadily into his eyes and ended for ever his reign of lawless rule. Sometimes the two-gun man was "planted," sometimes he subsided into innumerable pieces.

The hunter had a shrewd instinct that the hour had come to batter down his fellow's dogged resistance. There was no room for Callison, the man whom the hunter most feared.

The very look of the outlaw, with that grim, hard, capable aspect, should have been a warning.

"You've got him, Bucky?"

Looked the man over as he sat hunched beside the table and read in his face both terror and a sick, dogged cunning. Once before the fellow had been put through the third degree. Something of the sort he fully expected now. Villains are usually not consistent. This building bully should have been a hardy ruffian. Instead, he shrunk like a schoolgirl from the thought of physical pain.

"Stand up," ordered Callison, quietly.

Blackwell got to his feet at once. "Don't talk," he warned.

Look knew the man sweated under the punishment his imagination called for and he understood human nature too well to end the suspense by making

Holworthy Hall

Suppose among your casual acquaintances were a man wearing a different face—not a disguise—speaking a different voice, acting and living a changed personality, whom you discover to be actually someone you formerly had known intimately. Would you not be amazed and mystified? Such is the situation in "The Man Nobody Knew," excepting that the reader holds the secret. You see him in his former identity wherein he was a failure, with no real too savory. You follow him in his changed character, going among the same people with all his old proclivities and temptations, yet patently redeeming the past, making good. His experiences and adventures are remarkable and he has the oddest, most difficult problem ever placed before a man. It especially concerns the girl who had refused him in his former life.

what's right, Cephalo O'Connor, it's ever's right. You ask me any questions.

"I want to know all about the W. & S. robbery, everything, from start to finish."

"Honest, I wish I could tell you. But I don't know a thing about it. Cross my heart, I don't."

"No use, Blackwell. If I'm going to stand by you against Mr. Callison, you'd better tell the truth. Why, man, I've even got the marks you wore and the shape you cut it from."

"I reckon it must a-been some one else, major. Wish I could help you, but I can't."

"Bucky, I can't. All right. If you can't help me, I can't help you. Mr. Callison, I reckon, he's out and have some supper. Do you mind staying here with this man till I get back?"

"No. That's all right, Bucky. Don't hurry. I'll keep him entertained. Perhaps it was not by chance that his eye wandered to a blacksnake whip hanging on the wall."

O'Connor snatched at the door. The frightened gaze of the prisoner clung to him as if for safety.

"Major, Colonel, you ain't a-going," he pleaded.

"Only for an hour or two. I'll be back. I wouldn't think of saying goodbye—not till we reach Yuma."

With that the door closed, leaving him. Blackwell cried out, "Bucky, hurry! Master O'Connor's here! Tell me everything—every last thing. Mr. Callison—he's aiming to kill me soon as you're gone."

"I've got no time to fool away. Blackwell, I'm hungry. If you mean business get to it. But remember that whatever you say will be used against you."

"He told you any doggone thing you want to know. You've got me beat. I'm plumb worn out—sick. A man can't stand everything."

"Sit down. There's a good dinner waiting for you at O'Connor's when you get through."

His story was that he had found on the street a letter that had inadvertently been dropped. It was to John of the Callison's National bank, and it notified him that $20,000 was to be shipped to him by the W. & S. Express company on the night of the robbery. Blackwell resolved to have a try for it. He hung around the office until the manager and the guard arrived from the train, made his way up them, locked the door, and threw away his mask. He dived with the stolen into the nearest alley, and came face to face with the stranger whom he later learned to be Fredrick.

Fredrick, who had heard the shouting of the man locked in the express office, stopped the robber, but Blackwell broke away and ran down the alley. The shoe-peddler followed and caught him. After another scuffle the convict again managed himself free, but left behind the handkerchief containing the spoils. Fredrick, too, he later explained to Blackwell, fled a cord to the handle of the bag and dashed it down the chute of a laundry in such a way that it could later be drawn up. Then he hurried back to the express office and released the prisoners. After the excitement had subsided, he had returned for the money and hid it. The original robber did not know where.

Blackwell's second meeting with the shoe-peddler had been almost as startling as the first. Once and for all into the back of his mind, the two men recognized each other and entered into a compact to avenge Callison, for his share in which the other man was paid one

GOLDEN TEXT—Lying lips are abundant; but they that deal truly are his delight.—Prov. 12:22.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—1 Pt. 2:1-10; 2 Pt. 1:1-11; Matt. 23:1-36; Gal. 2:11-14; Eph. 4:25-32.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling the Truth.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Two Disciples and What Became of Them.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Folly and Sinfulness of Lying.

In this lesson we see the new community now called "the church" (v. 1) vindicated. In the boldness of Peter and John we see that the break with Judaism has come—the authority of the Sanhedrin is repudiated with the determination on the part of the disciples to be led by the Holy Spirit. It is for this reason that the body now gets the name "church." Since the break has come it must be shown to be a holy body; it must have recognition as being sacred. The sanctity of the tabernacle is transferred to the new body, which is God's dwelling place (Eph. 2:19-22). The church itself, as well as the people about, did not know this until God's judgment burst forth.

1. Characteristics of the Primitive Church (4:31-35).

1. It was a praying church (v. 31). For every want and every need they besought themselves to God in prayer.

2. It was a Spirit-filled church (v. 32). A praying church is a Spirit-filled church. The Spirit is given in answer to prayer (John 14:13).

3. It was a church which had great boldness in preaching the Word of God (v. 32). The minister in a Spirit-filled church will not offer an apology for the Bible, but will fearlessly preach it.

4. It was a united church (v. 32). They were "of one heart and one soul."

5. It was a charitable and generous church (v. 32). As needs arose supplies were given from a common fund.

6. Its ministers had a powerful testimony (v. 33).

7. It was a church whose membership exhibited unblemished character (v. 33). For "great grace was upon them all."

II. The Sin of Ananias and Sapphira (v. 1-11).

1. Its occasion (vv. 1, 2). This was their hypocritical imitation of the generous act of Barnabas (4:36, 37). Because of the peculiar distress of the early church when the open rupture was made with Judaism, the members for a time had a "community of goods." This was not universal nor permanent; some continued to own their own homes, as for example John Mark's mother, who used her home in Jerusalem to entertain Christians. Ananias and Sapphira sold a part of the money received for his land while pretending to give it all. His wife was a partner in it. They wanted the money of generosity without paying the price.

2. The judgment (vv. 5-10). Ananias allowed Satan to fill his heart and had after his arrest he was appointed to the Holy Ghost in keeping back a part of the price of the land. It was Company B 305th Ammunition Train of the National Army. In April, 1918, he was advanced to the office of corporal, with the certificate of sergeant. He went over seas as a volunteer, in the Tank Corps. He received his training in England and was placed in Company B, 100th Infantry, Heavy Battalion, Tank Corps, British 2nd 134th Company landed in France, and went into action at the Hildebrandt Tunnel on September 26th, 1918. Here he was wounded by a six pound shell from the German lines. Although he was cared for by friends, he died on October 1st, 1918, just 23 years from the day of his birth. He was buried in the Military Cemetery at Vieux-Neuve, Chaplain George V. Brown, 100th Infantry, officiating. These promotions are fine testimonials of his native qualities of character. We doubt if any of the most high God's gifts of men and women and especially by His choice of the ones who are called to the Lord (v. 14). This Tank Corps member. In this sense, the sin of Ananias and Sapphira was to be spread by merely saying and with tongue and will, so that the people were led to believe that they were under his shadow. Were the holiness of the body of Christ brought in, there would be many coming for pardon and salvation.

3. The hypocrites did not care to be (v. 10). It is interesting to note that this sinfulness of the holiness of the church did not deter any but hypocrites from joining it. Nothing could deter nor any hypocrite person has a place in the church. This applies to our offerings as well as to our persons.

since social sympathy, a higher ideal of manhood, a quickened business conscience, and a more abiding regard for the moral and spiritual values of our civilization.

Clarence Rishell

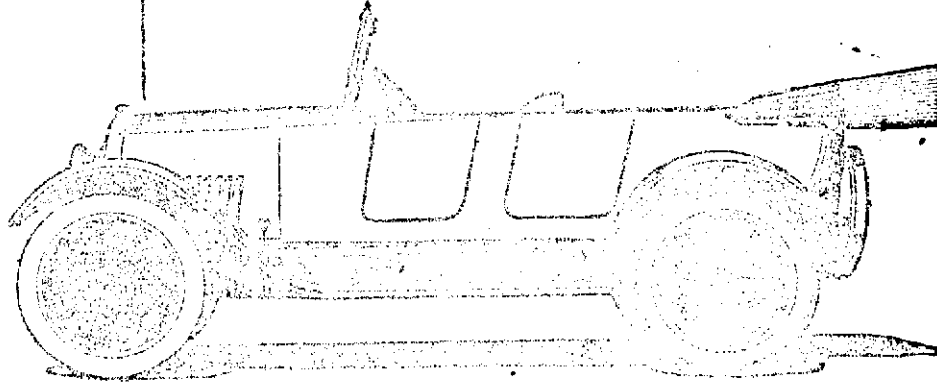

Our reconstruction problems are before us because two million of our best young men went over the sea and marched into the jaws of death. On foreign soil, to fight a foe of the German character, was a task of the first magnitude. The quick mobilization of these young men, and the capacity of their movement from citizen to soldier, from America to France, then from the camp to the field of battle awakened serious solicitude all over this land. We followed them with our sympathies, our prayers and our prayers. We increased our production of clothing for their comfort, and denied ourselves that they might be well fed. Over in France the spirit of a national brotherhood bound them together as the members of a fraternity. They maintained a heroism worthy of our national traditions. They received the weakening morale of the allied armies. Their fighting qualities struck terror into the very heart of Germany. One German general had told his men that the Americans could not fight. He watched their approach from the top of a hill, and as they pierced the German lines, captured prisoners, and still went on, and on, and on, the German General said "These Americans don't know when to quit." Amid the enthusiasms of a victorious march, the consciousness of their disappearance. Those who fall are buried in glory, while those who live are able to maintain a courage of man.

This High School made its contribution. Clearfield made her contribution. Loyal families all over the land, made their contribution. The High School Class of 1916 made their contribution of one young man, Clarence Rishell, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ashley Rishell, was honorably graduated from this High School with the Class of 1916. During his high school course he was a member of the Athletic Association, and was awarded honors in the football team of 1915. After graduation, he became a member with his father, until he was called to the national colors, August 1917. He was one of the first eleven young men called from this district, and was sent to Camp Lee, Virginia. Shortly after his arrival, he was appointed to the Acting Sergeant of the First Company, B 305th Ammunition Train of the National Army. In April, 1918, he was advanced to the office of corporal, with the certificate of sergeant. He went over seas as a volunteer, in the Tank Corps. He received his training in England and was placed in Company B, 100th Infantry, Heavy Battalion, Tank Corps, British 2nd 134th Company landed in France, and went into action at the Hildebrandt Tunnel on September 26th, 1918. Bob McElroy, who has been ill at the home of John Blake for several weeks in convalescing from a fall, is able to be about again.

The key conditions of the school for several days past have been very exciting to discuss now and then. A question, "What the whole of stand in slavery place?" may be asked, but the key words read no distinction between saint and sinner, and granted all with the same confidence. Some of these who were so fortunate as to fall received painful injuries, but so far as we can learn none received broken bones.

Why Not Wear Dainty Glasses

Lots of folks hesitate to wear glasses for the first on account of "looks."

When I fit your eyes with vision correcting lenses, I also advise as to the style of glass that best suits your face—some, nose glasses others the temple glasses. There's just as much distinction to glasses as there is a hat.

Cullison clipped in. Fendrick shrugged. "I've a notion to let it go to that. But what's the use? Understand this. I wasn't going to give Blackwell away, but since he has talked, I may tell what I know. It's true enough what he says. I did relieve him of the plunder."

"Sorry to hear that, Cass," Bucky commented gravely. "What did you do with it?"

The sheep owner flicked his cigarette ash into the tray and looked at the lieutenant out of half-shuttered, indolent eyes. "Gave it to you, Bucky. Got that letter I handed you the other day?"

The officer produced it from his safe. "Open it."

With a paper knife Bucky ripped the flap and took out a sheet of paper.

"There's something else in there," Fendrick suggested.

That something else proved to be a piece of paper folded tightly, which, being opened, disclosed a key.

O'Connor read aloud the letter:

"To Nicholas Bolt, Sheriff, or Bucky O'Connor, Lieutenant of Rangers:

"Having come into possession of a little valise which is not mine, I am getting rid of it in the following manner. I have rented a large safety-deposit box at the Cattleman's National bank and have put into it the valise with the lock still unbroken. The key is included herewith. Show, the cashier, will tell you that when this box was rented I gave explicit orders it should be opened only by the men whose names are given in an envelope left with him, not even excepting myself. The valise was deposited at exactly 10:30 a. m. the morning after the robbery, as Mr. Shaw will also testify. I am writing this the evening of the same day.

"CASS FENDRICK."

"Don't believe a word of it," Cullison exploded.

"Seems like believing," the sheepman murmured. He was enjoying greatly the disclosure of his foe.

"Makes a likely fairy tale. What for would you keep the money and not turn it back?"

"That's an easy one, Luck. He wanted to throw the burden of the robbery on you," Bucky explained.

"Well, I've got to be shown."

In the morning he was shown, Shaw confirmed exactly what Fendrick had said. He produced a sealed envelope. Within this was a sheet of paper, upon which were written two lines:

"Box 2143 is to be opened only by Sheriff Bolt or Lieutenant Bucky O'Connor of the Rangers, and before witnesses."

"CASS FENDRICK."

From the safety-deposit vault Bucky drew a large package wrapped in yellow paper. He cut the string, tore away the covering and disclosed a leather satchel. Perry Hawley, the local manager of the Western & Southern Express company, filed in this a key and took out a sealed bundle. This he ripped open before them all. Inside was found the sum of twenty thousand dollars in crisp new bills.

BAD BRONCHIAL COUGH FOR 36 YEARS

Mrs. Bice finally stopped it, without changing climate.

"I had bronchitis for 36 years. When I was 2 years old, I had whooping cough and it left me in an awful state. I tried all the remedies I could get, but I could not get it out. I had to sit up in bed all night and cough and shake until my eyes nearly burst out of their sockets. I could not afford to stop working."

"Finally my husband urged me to try Miles' Emulsion, saying it it didn't help me, I could get my money back. I tried it and have regained my health. I am now 36 years old and my lungs are free and clear and I can breathe with ease. When you think that I had this dread disease all my life, you can see why I want everybody to try Miles' Emulsion."

Mrs. Anna Bice, 1151 Wendell St., Columbus, Ohio.

2 years and a half and local remedies do not touch a cough of this kind. The system must be built up to throw it off. Miles' Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritious food and a certain medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, driving away with all sorts of pills and physic. It promotes appetite and makes the lungs the most delicate organs in the body. As a builder of flesh and strength, Miles' Emulsion is strongly recommended to those who are sickly, weak, and thin, and to those who are recovering from the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only cod liver oil made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Miles' Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions and if not satisfied with the results, your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Miles Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.

if Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache is a sign you have been eating too much meat, which forms uric acid.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region, it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and lazy.

When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them. Like you relieve your bowels removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water solids and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Fajal Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Fajal Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent light-water drink.

NO CAUSE FOR PANIC SAYS GENERAL BLUE

TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS FROM ALL POINTS
SHOW FLU IS UNDER CONTROL
OF AUTHORITIES

LOCAL SITUATION NOT SERIOUS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—Surgeon General Blue of the United States Public Health service today warned the country not to become panicky at the influenza situation despite the apparent increase in the number of cases. Nowhere, he said, is there any indication that the disease is beyond the control of local authorities.

Blue received telegraph reports as follows:
New York: 1,332 cases of influenza and 323 deaths, 450 pneumonia with 79 deaths.

Utah: "Some increase is being seen in Ogden."
Oklahoma: "Influenza seems on the increase but in mild form."

Wyoming: 152 cases, one death.
San Francisco: 69 cases, 10 deaths.
Montana: Much so-called grip in this state.
Connecticut: 242 cases "mostly in Waterbury."
Wisconsin: Scattering influenza cases.
Kansas: Influenza prevalent.
Richmond, Va.: 117 cases.

Officials of the University of Michigan hospital today telegraphed the Public Health bureau asking for prompt shipment of serum. Although no explanation was given officials assumed that it may be needed for treatment of influenza patients.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24—With one out of every 100 persons in Chicago ill with the influenza today, according to estimates, Health Commissioner Robertson returned to take charge of the offensive against the epidemic. There were 2,193 new cases reported yesterday and 48 deaths. New cases of pneumonia were 341 and 53 deaths. Telephone service was seriously threatened with 1600 operators ill with influenza.

There seems to be quite a number of cases he is attending in his office. The brief mention of two cases in the Progress is quite a bit of sickness. The situation as to whooping cough and a considerable number of and resultant pneumonia, among the "flu" cases in the East. Fortunately children, is much more serious, the disease being assisted in its spread by parents in the homes, concealing the fact of their children having the disease, and neglecting any quarantine regulations.

The Progress got into communication with a number of the physicians of the town today, and found that there is quite a bit of sickness. The situation as to whooping cough and a considerable number of and resultant pneumonia, among the "flu" cases in the East. Fortunately children, is much more serious, the disease being assisted in its spread by parents in the homes, concealing the fact of their children having the disease, and neglecting any quarantine regulations.

DEACON WILLIAMS GETS MAIL

CARRYING CONTRACT

Postmaster General Burleson has formed a partnership with Deacon Williams and these two distinguished gentlemen have entered into an agreement to enter into a contract to expedite the mails to and from the Clearfield postoffice and the different railroad stations.

During the past few years the Postoffice Department has been paying David Whaling $1,200 per year for hauling the mail in Clearfield, the contractor being required to furnish trucks and other equipment necessary for the work. The high cost of living hit Dave, and being unable to longer continue the work at the starvation wages offered, was forced to resign the position when his request for a raise was refused by the most economical and most begrudging Postmaster General in the country's history.

Bids were then asked for the job. The bids were opened December 28th, when it was found that Geo. Wilson wanted $1,500 to take the place of David Whaling, $1,750 and Deacon Williams, $1,400.

Waving his well-known sectional Jim Crow feelings, the Postmaster General took Deacon to the bosom of his official family, and notified him that the job was his. Upon the completion of the necessary and usual formalities relating to the appointment of two mail contractors, business organizations.

The "Deacon" is now preparing his affairs preparatory to assuming the burden of getting the mails in and out on time. Meanwhile the patrons of the office will ever pray for proper

BASKET BALL IS THE FAVORITE SPORT NOW

Varsity Team Loses Again But
Does Much Better Work
Than In Last Games

SCRUB TEAMS BOTH WIN OUT

Clearfield did a kind office business in basket ball last evening; out of three possible victories, Clearfield teams managed to get two. Junior High won from DuBois eighth grade and C. H. S. second team defeated the Reynoldsville reserves, but High's varsity men lost to Punxsutawney by a score of 42 to 33.

The game between Junior High and DuBois eighth grade was one of the "snappiest games seen on the High school floor this year. DuBois sent over a plucky bunch of players, but Coach Ross' huskies (they will be some day) were a little too much for them. Backed up by an enthusiastic bunch of rooters, Junior High proceeded to win from the DuBois team by a score of 7 to 10. Both teams showed a considerable amount of skill and although the referee experienced some difficulty in keeping track of the "fouls," the game was highly satisfactory.

The two schools were represented by the following players:

J. H. S. DuBois
Mitchell F. Russell
Waterworth P. W. Miller
Brown C. Schwom
Barney G. B. Miller
Cramer G. Fry

Substitutes: J. H. S. Shugarts and Corrigan; DuBois, Sparks.

In the first few minutes of the game between C. H. S. and Reynoldsville second teams the playing was loose and without any semblance of skill or team work. Several of the Clearfield players had never played in a big game before and consequently it took them quite a while to get their bearings. But once they did get settled into their proper places the scrubs lived up to their name by cleaning up the Reynoldsville team in neat order.

Many of the scores on both sides were due to good luck rather than skillful playing, especially in the first half. When the game was resumed at the beginning of the second half, however, Reynoldsville struck a new pace and by keeping it up for a time made the game interesting. C. H. S. worked hard and by means of good guarding and increased speed in their floor work they soon put a dampener on Reynoldsville's spirit. The visitors put up a game fight to the end but lost by a score of 23-16.

The following men defended the sub-title of their respective schools: Reynoldsville: C. H. S. J. Smith, C. Smith, J. Smith, J. Benney, R. Ammerman, G. J. Miller, N. Smith, G. J. Love. Substitutes: Reynoldsville, H. Warren; Clearfield, Batchelor. Despite the fact that they had never played together in a game before, Clearfield's substitutes developed a surprising amount of team work and it was because of this co-ordinated effort that they were enabled to win.

The local High School football team was unable to check its winning streak of the Punxsutawney High and accordingly went down to defeat in a league game on the Punxsutawney floor by the score of 42 to 33.

The local boys showed the good effects of the strenuous practice they had been getting since the Reynoldsville game and are rapidly improving in form.

They put up a great battle at Punxsutawney for all but the final two minutes of the game. At the end of the first half the score stood Clearfield 15; Punxsutawney, 14. The boys maintained their lead in a grueling battle up to within two minutes of the final whistle, when the pace became too hot, the ball went up and Punxsutawney copped four baskets and the game.

The other League games resulted as follows:

At Brookville: DuBois, 57; Brookville, 24.
At New Bethlehem: Reynoldsville, 40; New Bethlehem, 29.

KRUPP WORKERS ARE CONTENT WITHOUT BEER WITH LUNCH

By Carl D. Groat

United Press Staff Correspondent
ESSEN, Germany.—(By Mail)—The myth that the laborer must have his beer to be contented is only a myth, according to Herr Fritz Homann of the Krupp works.

Herr Homann, who speaks English like an English gentleman and without the trace of a German accent, was my conductor on an interesting trip through the famous steel plant. "What is the situation as regards drinking among your workers," I asked.

"We abolished beer from our plant before the war, and find that its absence does not impair either the contentment or the efficiency of the workers," he replied. "We used to issue mineral water and milk to take the place of the beer. Of course, issuing milk is now quite out of the question, especially when there isn't enough in Germany for babies and invalids. So we give them mineral water instead. It makes absolutely no difference with them that they do not have their beer."

"Of course, they can have beer—so long as it is after hours outside the plant, but our beer is, I judge, about the same as American beer at this time as regards strength and quality."

As to the prohibition movement in general, Herr Homann was skeptical of its taking a hold on Germany. "It is a pity," he pointed out, "are more conservative than before the war, and generally cut off a lot of the poorer classes, hence there is a limited reaction in the drinking of strong liquors."

"We have in Germany," he continued, "the sort of prohibition movement that we have two groups—the Blue Cross and the 'Gut Templers,' the latter being an organization which comes here from the Scandinavian countries. There is in Germany, however, little drunkenness and hence little that these organizations can do. As for beer and wine, they are taken everywhere in Germany. In fact, I have been told that the probable outcome of the prohibition movement in America will be that beer and wine will ultimately be permitted."

RESTITUTION MADE TO INNOCENT MAN WITH WAR RECORD

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 24.—United Press—Convicted and sentenced to two years and nine months in the penitentiary for larceny and at the same time given a dishonorable discharge from the regular army as a result, a former soldier, through a confession made by his brother to the crime he was charged with, is to be restored to his full rights with an honorable discharge from the army.

In December 1915, Private Jacob E. Shockey, a member of "77" Company, Third Infantry, U. S. A., was convicted in the Franklin county court of larceny and sentenced to the Eastern penitentiary. At the same time he was given a dishonorable discharge from the army. Several weeks ago Shockey wrote to the eastern division headquarters of the army at Governor's Island, claiming that the Pennsylvania State Pardon Board had granted him a pardon because his brother had confessed to the crime for which he was sentenced to the penitentiary.

Governor's Island Officials wrote the Pennsylvania State Department to verify the former soldier's claim and the official records of this office which were sent to them did this. A copy of the pardon bearing the Great Seal of the Commonwealth was mailed to the army officials and as a result the stigma of a dishonorable discharge and a court conviction for a crime will have been removed.

Eddie Leitzinger and brother John attended the show at Phillipsburg last evening.

"FLU" AGAIN

"Yes, every bad cold will be flu now," said one of the same neighbors who said the same thing last year and did not see to his senses until he saw the undertakers getting busy in his neighborhood.

Government health officials and medical men are again giving their good advice and warning the people that there is a likelihood of a return of influenza. Their judgment appears to have been good as the flu is already upon us and while there is cause for alarm there is good reason for heeding the warning.

No cure for the disease has yet been found. Medical science pointed out that mortal man can do is to set his house in order for the reception of the unwelcome visitor. This can be done only by keeping in good physical condition and going to bed at the first appearance of symptoms. The symptoms are sneezing, headache, tickling cough and pains in the legs, groins and back, resembling rheumatic pains. These symptoms are always present. Immediate attention from a physician in case that there be an early diagnosis, is the best safeguard.

Let us not take lightly the second approach of the flu. Remember that in keeping it down you are serving the interests of your neighbor as well as yourself.

HOW DO YOU LIKE THIS?

"Uncle Joe" Cannon is exhibiting his friends a poem sent to him by a Democrat who is sorely tried these days. The poem is imbued with the spirit of Edgar Allan Poe. The stanzas follow the Washington Star to show the affecting verses, which read:

It is a midnight dreary,
I pondered weak and weary,
Under the pale moon of a night,
Of old I loved you Billy Bryan
And of all his silver love,
Suddenly there came a rapping,
Of some one greatly tapping,
Tapping on my chamber door,
And a silver voice came speaking:
"Billy's with you evermore!"

"Oh!" in anguish cried I, weeping;
I thought you dead and sleeping,
Lying in a silver casket.
On some far and Stygian shore!"

"Oh!" said Billy, "only waiting;
Now I'll join in your debating;
I am with you evermore!"

"Oh, Bill!" cried I, "have some pity!
We've danced to your ditty,
Danced on plain, in town and city,
And went bustled, riled and sore;
And with thou forever vex us?
With thou, William, still perplex us?"

"And, quoth William, 'Evermore!'"

"Oh!" I cried, "Oh, ghost!" upstart—
Sneer through my soul now darting—
"I never died and sad and sore,
And you evermore outlast us?
And you evermore—till us?
And as up as heretofore?"

"And quoth William, 'Evermore!'"

SQUIRE MILLIGAN WANTS TO BE HEARD

Squire James A. Milligan asks to be "born in" on that "last wolf" which long enough to say he saw the animal during the winter of 1886. Editor Frank D. O'Reilly, of the Daily Express, suggests converting the "county battle" into a barracks for the army. Why not?

Address Of Dr. Bender At Unveiling of Rishell Memorial

Only ninety-five years ago, the 17th interest. Ludendorff was recognized of next June the foundation of as the brains of the German army. Bunker Hill Monument our first great Hindenberg was his subordinate, and Memorial of Patriotism was finished, the Kaiser is called Ludendorff's "rubber stamp."

and the corner stone was put in its place by Lafayette. Daniel Webster delivered an oration to a great audience, in which there were 200 Revolutionary veterans, 40 of them survivors of the battle of Bunker Hill, fifty years before. Today 110 millions of people cherish the National ideals that became triumphant by the Revolutionary war.

English Lords had been asking, "How is it possible for an army of undisciplined citizens, without ammunition without money, or navy to fight against the strongest nation on earth?" The answer was given at Yorktown, when the governor of Virginia asked Lafayette, "To what particular spot would you direct us to point our cannon?" Lafayette, raising his hand and pointing to the spot, replied, "To that house; it is the best house in the world."

It is the best house in the world, and there you will be certain to find Lord Cornwallis, and the British Headquarters. That unselfish and whole-souled patriotism demand the sacrifice of property and of life was our answer to Great Britain. This same spirit has made possible all of the memorials of our National Life.

Memorials are the land-marks of history. They keep open the path over which past generations have trodden. They preserve the memory of great events. They signalize victories. They glorify the men and women who made the sacrifices demanded by the necessities of the hour. They declare that the ideals of human progress shall never perish. They require the reading of every passing generation. The stamp of divine approval was put upon them when God said to Moses, "Write this for a memorial, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua." Moses built an Altar, and inscribed on it, "Jehovah, my Banner."

We have recently come through the greatest war in history. The meaning and magnitude of our victory grows upon us like a morning dawn. In its beginning and upon the surface, the war seemed to be simply a conflict of national armies. Misunderstanding and confusion prevailed as to the underlying motive of Germany, Russia and England. Germany called it a war for the defense of the Fatherland and announced that it had been forced upon her. Diplomats declared that Russia had entered the war in order to capture Constantinople for her passage to the sea. The English government was greatly embarrassed by a prevalent misunderstanding of the moral pressure that made England the ally of Belgium and France. By a German propaganda, both in England and in this country, it was declared to be a war in the interest of capital in England, labor said "Let the Capitalists fight it out with Germany." They were very reluctant to enlist until Lloyd George went to them and convinced them of their error. This country stood aloof until the real meaning of the war came into clear vision.

As the war progressed it gradually became clear that beneath the conflicts of armies, there was a conflict of national ideals. With Germany the ideal was military supremacy for word empire; autocracy against democracy; the divine right of kings against the divine right of citizenship. With the allies the ideal was the national welfare of humanity, in the spirit of democracy. Upon the part of Germany reliance was based upon a vast organization of material power, while upon the part of the allies reliance was placed upon an approved national conscience as to civic righteousness. With forty years of silent preparation, Germany was provided with the stronger force at the beginning, while the Allies had to wait for the awakening of the national conscience, and until they had come into the consciousness of their national peril.

A War of Frighfulness

For the same reason Germany made it a war of frighfulness from the beginning. Her object was to strike terror into the hearts of the allies, by the destruction of property, by the devastation of cities and country, by the renunciation of national treaties, by ignoring international laws, by brutality and an indiscriminate slaughter of men, women and children, by becoming the hidden peril of the sea, and the death-dealing power of the air. In these various ways Germany hoped to break down the spirit and morale of the allies, as tyrants used to break down the spirit of slaves.

We (the United States) declared war against Germany April 5th, 1917. General Von Ludendorff's history of the war, from the German side, contains many statements of absorbing interest. Ludendorff was recognized of the allies, induced by economic interests. He says, "The Allies were deeply in debt to the United States, and their defeat would have involved the United States in heavy loss. Therefore, when the United States saw that the allies were in great danger of defeat, they came to their aid, that they might not lose the millions that the allies had borrowed." Ludendorff seems to be ignorant of the manner in which President Wilson set before Congress, the moral pressure that, as a divine imperative, was driving us into the war.

Ludendorff says, "With the help of our submarines, we reckoned on a decision in our favor, at that time the Kaiser to have said, at that time 'First, the American army cannot be raised in time.' 'Second, They cannot come across.' 'Third, They cannot fight if they do come.'"

Our Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Daniels, in an address in Harrisburg, December 8, 1919, said, "The Americans, in company with some British and French, captured a bag of German prisoners. One of them was an officer, who had spent some time in America, and could speak good English. The German asked the Englishman how he had obtained his Victoria Cross; and the Frenchman how he had obtained the Cross of the Legion of Honor; and himself told how he won the Iron Cross; but, said the Captain, 'while I now understand how you got the Victoria Cross, and you got the Cross of the Legion of Honor, and I know how I got the Iron Cross, tell me, how did those Americans get a cross?'"

Ludendorff says, "Soon after America's declaration of war, the whole world was ranged against us." The ing and magnitude of the German advance aroused the righteous indignation of all Christian civilization. By this time it had become clear that this was a war of German materialism against the spiritual forces of the allied nations. General Ludendorff's history shows that Germany had placed her reliance, in the field, upon great organized war-machine of men and guns; while the allies placed their chief reliance in the field, upon the quality and upon the morale of their men. In no previous war had such care been given to preserve the physical, moral and manly qualities of an army. Everything that could be done, was done to preserve health, and morals, to awaken enthusiasm, to maintain the esprit de corps of the army, and to maintain the spirit and ideals of true manhood. It was the contrast of the two armies at this point, that finally alarmed both Hindenburg and Ludendorff.

Ludendorff writes, "As long as our troops kept their morale, they could get the better of any foe." (They had not yet fought against our army). He says that the pressure of the American army weighed heavily upon the German army, and then adds, "America became the decisive power in the war." Feverishly Ludendorff appealed to Berlin to do something to restore the morale of the army, but it was all in vain. The spirit, the dash, the enthusiasm, and what General Grant called "The swing of conquest" had deserted the German army.

Mr. Daniels, Secretary of our Navy, has made an interesting statement that bears upon this point. He says, "When the submarine warfare was at its height, and ships were being sunk faster than they could be built; and when the prospects of final success were on the German side, our government proposed to the allied council, that we bottle up the North Sea with a net work of mines. The distance is 230 miles across the neck of the bottle. The European governments said, 'We haven't the men, and it is too stupendous and hazardous an undertaking.' Our government replied, 'We will make every mine, transport it and lay it.' We went ahead, and 80,000 mines were made and transported to the North Sea. The British planted 17,000 of them, and we planted 63,000. This mine barrage had been scarcely completed, when ten submarines sailed into the jaws of death, and were blown to smithereens. Others got caught in the corners, and hurried back home to report that progress was impossible, except at great hazard. The German navy had many ships and brave men, but their coming out to sea now meant death. Then the German navy mutinied, before the Hindenburg line broke. This, Mr. Daniels says, broke the morale of the German army.

The consternation of Germany caused by America depicted in one of Frank Holland's famous cartoons, in England. The Kaiser, alone in a boat, is in evident fright. He is looking at a constellation of stars, from which proceed a long line of bayonets directed against him, while Uncle Sam takes the place of the man in the moon, and looks down upon the Kaiser's fright with evident pleasure. This is what our war activities meant to Germany.

The Reflex Influence of the War Upon Us

By this time we ought to be able to discover the reflex influence of this war upon us. This war has made it clear that there are two levels of citizenship. First, there is the level of the individual—his rights, his sphere of activity and the rewards of his personal merits. Second—There is the higher level of citizenship seen in times of peace we are apt to lose sight of the magnifying power that national activity secures to the individual. In the development of a national consciousness, and a national conscience, the spirit of the national unit pervades us all. We then live out of individualism into nationalism; out of our personal littleness into an aggregate greatness; out of weakness into power. In this magnified citizenship our national ideals come into vision. The national flag then comes forth as the emblem of national power. It relates us to a glorious past, and leads the way to a more glorious future. The flag unifies and idealizes our national life. It gives coherence and order to our activities, and reflects the glory of achievement. By it the loyal citizenship of the whole nation is elevated. Our national ideals and our patriotism become sacred. Selfishness is surmounted by the enthusiasm of the national spirit.

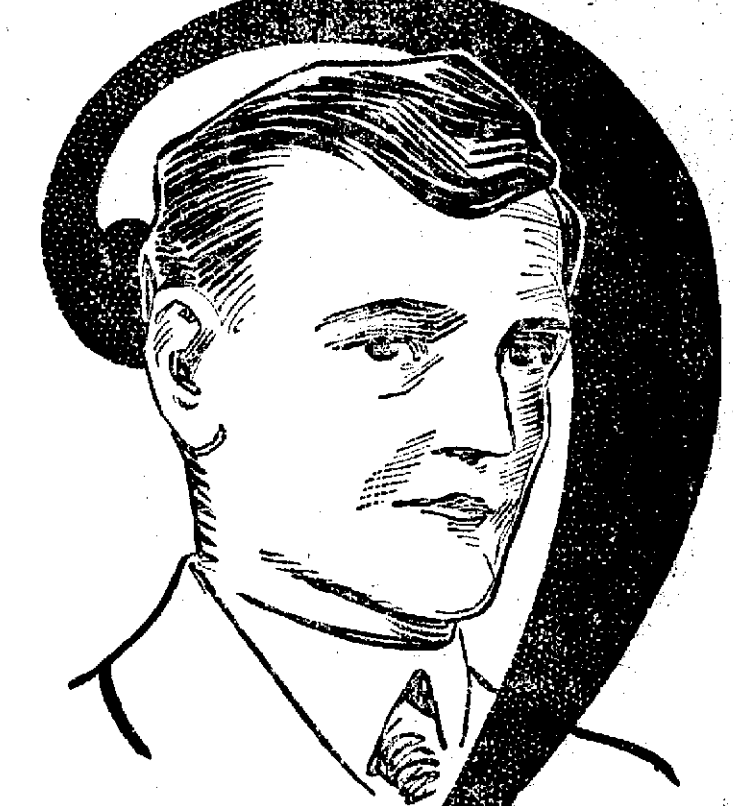

In such a moral atmosphere, to die for one's country is gain. Here victory means not only a vanquished enemy, but the triumph of enlarged manhood. It is a revelation of a national power that is able to sweep away the obstructions that lie in the path of human progress. By this national activity the individual is carried to the summit of aspirational achievement, where he sees light in God's light, and enters into the joy of his Lord. Such men die in calm repose beneath the gaze of the stars.

In his last naval battle for his country, Lord Nelson fell upon the deck of his vessel, mortally wounded. As the sleep of death was coming upon him, an officer bent down over the great warrior and said, "We have gained the victory." Lord Nelson was aroused out of his stupor, and replied, "Thank God, I have done my duty."

Another reflex influence of this war is a quickened moral insight that comes through suffering. This war has brought to a sudden halt, the materialistic trend of our civilization. During the past fifty years of peaceful prosperity, we concentrated our minds upon a practical material efficiency. Moral, intellectual and religious culture were all subordinated to a materialistic culture. The conviction became current that international commerce would prevent war; that our complex financial interests so demanded the conditions of peace, as to make it clear that no nation would imperil her existence by plunging into war.

We were also persuaded that our modern science would prevent war; that science had so far brought within our grasp, the destructive forces of nature, that war would mean destruction, as to make it an impossible peril, in this day of intelligence. We have been shocked into a moral consciousness by the colossal failure of our materialistic philosophy. The great nation, in which modern science was given the right of way, and in which, applied science attained to a more absolute efficiency than in any other, has turned out to be the greatest enemy that civilization has had to confront. These German champions of material efficiency had vast armies of scientifically trained men; equipped with all the destructive forces that science had evolved; that moved with the precision of great machinery; whose cannon cast the messengers of death a distance of 75 miles; whose airplanes from the clouds, dropped explosives and death-dealing gasses of frightful efficiency; and YET that nation now lies prostrate with exhaustion and humiliated by defeat. With her downfall, she carries the everlasting explosion of her materialistic philosophy.

Lots of folks hesitate to wear glasses for the first on account of "looks."

Cullison clipped in. Fendrick shrugged. "I've a notion to let it go to that. But what's the use? Understand this. I wasn't going to give Blackwell away, but since he has talked, I may tell what I know. It's true enough what he says. I did relieve him of the plunder."

"Sorry to hear that, Cass," Bucky commented gravely. "What did you do with it?"

The sheep owner flicked his cigarette ash into the tray and looked at the lieutenant out of half-shuttered, indolent eyes. "Gave it to you, Bucky. Got that letter I handed you the other day?"

The officer produced it from his safe. "Open it."

With a paper knife Bucky ripped the flap and took out a sheet of paper. "There's something else in there," Fendrick suggested.

That something else proved to be a piece of paper folded tightly, which, being opened, disclosed a key.

O'Connor read aloud the letter: "To Nicholas Bolt, Sheriff, or Bucky O'Connor, Lieutenant of Rangers: 'Having come into possession of a little valise which is not mine, I am getting rid of it in the following manner. I have rented a large safety-deposit box at the Cattleman's National bank and have put into it the valise with the lock still unbroken. The key is included herewith. Show, the cashier, will tell you that when this box was rented I gave explicit orders it should be opened only by the men whose names are given in an envelope left with him, not even excepting myself. The valise was deposited at exactly 10:30 a. m. the morning after the robbery, as Mr. Shaw will also testify. I am writing this the evening of the same day."

"CASS FENDRICK."

"Don't believe a word of it," Cullison exploded. "Seems like believing," the sheepman murmured. He was enjoying greatly the disclosure of his foe.

"Makes a likely fairy tale. What for would you keep the money and not turn it back?"

"That's an easy one, Luck. He wanted to throw the burden of the robbery on you," Bucky explained.

"Well, I've got to be shown."

In the morning he was shown, Shaw confirmed exactly what Fendrick had said. He produced a sealed envelope. Within this was a sheet of paper, upon which were written two lines:

"Box 2143 is to be opened only by Sheriff Bolt or Lieutenant Bucky O'Connor of the Rangers, and before witnesses."

"CASS FENDRICK."

From the safety-deposit vault Bucky drew a large package wrapped in yellow paper. He cut the string, tore away the covering and disclosed a leather satchel. Perry Hawley, the local manager of the Western & Southern Express company, filed in this a key and took out a sealed bundle. This he ripped open before them all. Inside was found the sum of twenty thousand dollars in crisp new bills.

BAD BRONCHIAL COUGH FOR 36 YEARS

Mrs. Bice finally stopped it, without changing climate.

"I had bronchitis for 36 years. When I was 2 years old, I had whooping cough and it left me in an awful state. I tried all the remedies I could get, but I had to sit up in bed all night and cough and shake until my eyes nearly burst out of their sockets. I could not afford to stop working."

"Finally my husband urged me to try Miles' Emulsion, saying it it didn't help me, I could get my money back. I tried it and have regained my health. I am now 36 years old and my lungs are free and clear and I can breathe with ease. When you think that I had this dread disease all my life, you can see why I want everybody to try Miles' Emulsion."

Mrs. Anna Bice, 1151 Wendell St., Columbus, Ohio.

2 years and a half and local remedies do not touch a cough of this kind. The system must be built up to throw it off. Miles' Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritious food and a perfect medicine. If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache is a sign you have been eating too much meat, which forms uric acid.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region, it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and lazy.

When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them. Like you relieve your bowels removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water solids and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Fain Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Fain Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent light-water drink.

To Darken Hair Apply Sage Tea

A few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur brings back its vigor, color, gloss and youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does not naturally, so evenly. You just dunk a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.
